Vaccines for Children Offered July 15th in Trenton

Children swarmed the streets of downtown Culbertson as candy sailed from Corey’s Cannon during the 4th of July Parade on Friday, July 4, members of the Culbertson 4th of July Parade. They carried banners with their message - Climate Can’t Wait. Other ideas included a 20 foot gear and an art display. The Marchers felt that reaching out to those interested in the cause first was an important step. Offers included individuals growing and preserving their own food, creating new habits to better the environment and taking part in more conversations about climate change. On Friday, July 4, members of the March for Climate Action took part in the Culbertson 4th of July Parade. They carried banners with their message: Climate Can’t Wait! and songs sung along the parade route.

The March for Climate Action began on March 1, 2014 in Wilmington, a small community in Los Angeles, California. The marchers made up way across the southern United States by connecting Arizona, New Mexico and Colorado before entering Nebraska on July 4. The group made up way throughout Nebraska with signs in Beatrice, Ponca, Benkelman, Max, Stratton, Trena and Columbus. They plan to continue across the state and reach the Nebraska State Capitol on July 24.

Members of the March are expected to walk between 12 and 18 miles per day. A 20 foot gear truck, a smaller truck that serves as a kitchen, and a pick-up truck that hauls the EcomCommunity accompany the Marchers. In addition, solar generators provide electricity.

The goal of the March is to bring together and reinvigorate the environmental and climate change movement through the website climate March.org. The goal of the March is to facilitate a public discussion of rejecting the Keystone pipeline. March coordinators choose to walk through Nebraska because it is to the focal point of the Keystone pipeline. In addition, solar generators provide electricity.

The Village would place a metal wall around the library to keep the space free of cars. Hulbert Park would also be used. The Village would place a metal wall around the library to keep the space free of cars. Hulbert Park would also be used.

The March will be completed on November 1, 2014 in Washington D.C. just a few days before the election.

No Acceptable Bids for Culbertson Library Project

The Culbertson Village Board of Trustees reviewed the bid submitted for the building of the Culbertson Public Library. Two contractors submitted bids for the project. McCook Contractors placed a bid of $668,000 and Carmichel Construction LLC of Hastings submitted a bid of $661,000. Both bids were well above the amount estimated by the Village, Miller and Associates. The architects suggested talking with Carmichel Construction to see if there were any cuts that could be made to keep the project closer to initial estimates.

Architects suggested reducing the size or reworking the floor plan to cut costs. They also planned to ask contractors about the costs of a steel building. Librarian Cindy Wagner went over the floor plans for the new library.

The Board also discussed improving the old City Hall building to make it more usable and to make it available to the public.

The Village would be looking for the library to share the space of the current library with members of the community.
